IRS Tax Tip 2019-40, April 11, 2019

Tax-related identity theft occurs when a thief uses someone's stolen Social Security number to file a tax return and claim a fraudulent refund. The victim may be unaware that this has happened until they e-file their return. Even before the victim files their return, the IRS may send the taxpayer a letter saying the agency identified a suspicious return using the stolen SSN.

Here are some things people should know about identity theft, including warning signs and steps to take after identity theft.

Welcome to the IRS Disaster Relief Resource Center for Tax Professionals.

Disasters can mean that many payroll and practitioner businesses and their clients suffer significant losses. Our goal is to provide resources and help to the affected payroll and practitioner community.

This resource center addresses common questions from tax professionals.

For news releases and other announcements on recent disasters, see Tax Relief in Disaster Situations. Disaster relief applies to tax preparers who are unable to file returns or make payments on behalf of the client because of the disaster. Taxpayers outside of the disaster area may qualify for relief if:

- their preparer is in the disaster area, and
- the preparer is unable to file or pay on their behalf.

All tax professionals should be aware that they, too, are targets of cybercriminals seeking fraudulent tax returns for refunds. Are you prepared? Protect your clients and protect your business.

The IRS recommends tax professionals use Publication 4557, Safeguarding Taxpayer Data, to review your current security measures and to create or update your security plan. It is critical to take these precautions and address any weaknesses.

The IRS also recommends tax professionals create an action plan to outline the steps you should take to protect your business should the worst occur.

The "Protect Your Clients, Protect Yourself" campaign to raise awareness among tax professionals is a joint project by the IRS, states and the tax community to combat identity theft. Client data held by tax professionals, cybercriminals increasingly are targeting the tax professionals must take appropriate steps to protect their clients' data and protect their business.

IMPORTANT: Always use robust security software for all computers and devices, and regularly update security software. Identify any malware/virus infections. Use strong password to access computers and client data. Beware of phishing email schemes.

Should you experience a data compromise – whether by cybercriminals, theft or accident – you should take. For a comprehensive list of security actions, consult a security professional.

Preliminary steps include:

First Steps in Reporting a Data Breach or Ransomware Attack

- Contact your local Stakeholder Liaison (SL) quickly; provide details and information promptly
- Follow the guidance from your SL, Pub 5293, Pub 5447 and the IRS Data Breach webpage
- Take proactive steps to discover the cause of the attack
- Notify local and other federal agencies depending on type of attack

Data Theft Information for Tax Pros

Protect Your Clients; Protect Yourself Data Security Resource Guide for Tax Professionals

The Data Security Resource Guide for Tax Professionals is intended to provide a basic understanding of minimal steps to protect client data. All tax professionals are encouraged to work with cybersecurity professionals to ensure secure systems. Protecting taxpayer data from theft and disclosure is your responsibility.

Get Started

The Security Summit – the partnership between the Internal Revenue Service, state tax agencies and the tax industry – reminds all tax professionals that everyone has a role in protecting taxpayer data.

The Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999, also known as Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, requires certain entities – including tax return preparers – to create and maintain a security plan for the protection of client data.

Here are two publications to help you get started:

- IRS Publication 4557, Safeguarding Taxpayer Data
This publication provides an overview of tax professionals' obligations to protect taxpayer information and provides a step-by-step checklist for how to create and maintain a security plan for your digital network and office.
- NIST's Small Business Information Security – The Fundamentals
The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) is a branch of the U.S. Commerce Department. It sets the information security framework for federal agencies. It also produced this document to provide small businesses with an overview of those steps to security data. Its focus is on five principles: identity, protect, detect, respond and recover.

Don't forget Publication 1345, Handbook for Authorized IRS e-File Providers, which outlines your responsibility as an Electronic Return Originator, including in the area of e-File security and privacy.

IRSAC expands to cover more areas of the IRS; IRPAC and ACT to join centralized advisory committee in 2019

The Internal Revenue Service announced today that the Internal Revenue Service Advisory Council's role will expand in 2019 to have a more centralized role and to incorporate two other advisory groups.

The new centralized advisory committee will include areas currently covered by both the Information Reporting Program Advisory Committee (IRPAC) and the Advisory Committee on the Tax Expenditure System (ACT). The new advisory group will be more focused on the tax system's impact on the economy and government revenue.
